Volunteer Advisory Commissions welcome applications

If you'd like to help guide land use in your community, the Regional District has some opportunities for you.

Applications are being accepted for volunteer members to serve on the Agricultural Advisory Commission (AAC) and the Central Okanagan West Advisory Planning Commission (APC).

These groups work with RDCO Planning Services staff to review development and land use applications within the Electoral Areas. The comments and recommendations provided is considered in decisions made by the Regional Board.

Advisory Commission members will be selected on the basis of their:

- Demonstrated interest and participation in community matters
- Academic / technical qualifications,
- Availability
- Work experience
- Knowledge / professional expertise and land use planning

Prospective AAC members may reside anywhere within the Central Okanagan, while the majority of Central Okanagan West Advisory Planning Commission members must live in the electoral area.

Information and a link to a convenient application form is available online at rdco.com/advisorycommissions or by contacting the RDCO Community Services Planning department by email at planning@rdco.com or calling 250-469-6227.

The Regional District provides approximately 80 different programs and services to residents across the Central Okanagan.
